Yuta : Here is our kotatsu, Mike.

Mike : Wow! Show me how to use it.

Yuta : It's easy. Switch on, and get in. Come here, Mike.

Mike : Oh, it's warm, and it's nice to sit on the floor!

Yuta : Is that (㉡) for you?

Mike : Yes. Usually, we Americans don't do that... So, what do you do at the kotatsu?

Yuta : We just sit and talk. And, we always drink tea here after dinner.

Mike : Anything else?

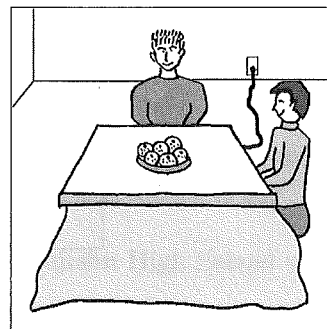

Yuta : Well, on New Year's Day, we sit at the kotatsu and watch TV together almost all day.
We also talk a lot.

Mike : I see. It's important to talk with your family. Is communication among family members easier at the kotatsu?

Yuta : The kotatsu is useful for talking more. Oh, there is another good thing. When I do my homework here, I can always find someone to help me.

Mike : That's nice. Family members can help each other.

Yuta : Yes. I've found good things about the kotatsu. But, Mike, there is [ア thing

- 5 次の英文は、中学3年生の由美子(Yumiko)が、クラスメートの佳代(Kayo)とのできごとについて書いたものである。この英文を読んで、(1)~(6)の問いに答えなさい。(16点)

It was September. When I came home, I was very surprised. My mother said, "I heard sad news today. Kayo is going to move to England with her family next month." At the time, I couldn't believe that. Kayo was my best friend. Also, she was my best tennis partner. She played tennis ③(well) than I. I can't forget her words in an important tennis match. She came to me many times and said, "Don't give up! We can do it!" At last, we won the match. Playing tennis together at Fujisan High School became our dream. We often studied together after school. I wasn't good at English, so Kayo ⑥(teach) it to me.

The next day in the classroom, I asked her about her move to England. She answered, "Well, . I'm sorry, Yumiko."

I said in tears, "Why didn't you tell me? I thought I could go to Fujisan High School with you. I'm so sad." Kayo only answered, "I'm sorry." Then she became quiet. From that day, Kayo and I stayed away from each other.

One day, when I was walking on the street, I met Kayo's father. He said to me, "Kayo always talks about you at home. She likes you very much." He told me two more things. When he told her about their move, she went to her room and cried. Also, she really wanted to play tennis with me at Fujisan High School. Then, I understood Kayo was sad like me. I started to think about doing something for her.

The next day, I asked our teacher to have a party to say goodbye to Kayo. A week later, we had it in the classroom. At the end of the party, Kayo walked to the front and said, "Thank you very much for everything. I had a wonderful time in this class. I'll never forget all of you." She smiled when she finished her speech, but she looked very sad.

After the party, I went to Kayo with flowers and said, "I was always happy to be with you, Kayo. I will go to Fujisan High School. There, I'll practice tennis and study English hard. After high school, I will go to England and study English more. I'll never give up. Will you play tennis with me then?"

Kayo smiled and answered, "Sure, Yumiko! We can do it! You are my best tennis partner. You are the person who understands me the most, and my best friend forever."
